

Short but Good Rules.

Patience last.
Take little annoyances out of the way.

When any good happens in any one place.

When others are suffering, drop a word of sympathy.

Tell of your own faults rather than those of others.

Hide your own troubles, but watch to help others out of theirs.

Take hold of the knob and shut every door behind you without slamming it.

Carefully clean the mud and snow from your boots before entering the house.

Never interrupt any conversation; wait patiently for your own turn to speak.

Look for beauty in everything and take a cheerful view of every event.

After any quarrel you feel friendly, try to be the first to do a little pleasant thing.

Don't let your good money for company, but be equally polite at home and abroad.

If an individual gives an angry answer, give him a friendly one.

Always speak politely and kindly to your servant if you would have them do as much for you.

Don't use big words. In promoting your own interests, or in discussing important social, political and philosophical or psychological subjects, be plain and to the point.

Let your conversation possess a clarified consciousness, comprehensive, consistent and unconfined energy. Review all your impressions of the past.

THE WILMINGTON POST.

WILMINGTON, N. C.
 MONDAY MORNING, FEB. 4, 1902.

A monstrous story, or a story of monstrousness, you pay your money and you take your choice—comes from Bellefontaine, Ohio. Solomon Yoder, an inmate of the infirmary, last week yielded up the ghost and departed to that clime where lines that are not found and old blankets do not abound; and just what the pathetic Solomon will submit upon is just finding out. After death a post mortem was held, which developed the fact that his intestines were completely impregnated with all kinds of foreign substances. For twelve years he would eat anything that he could cram down his throat. He first commenced eating the plastering from the wall of his room, swallowing whole sheets of it, until it became necessary to cover the wall with sheet iron. A number of times he was found nearly suffocated, with a piece of blanket or cloth hanging from his mouth, which would develop in a strip a yard or two long when pulled out. In his bowels were found plaster, dirt, rags, and a mass of stuff that caused inflammation and mortification.

A watchman in one of the Nevada mines, having no watch, borrowed one for a night, and on returning it next day said he made a timekeeper of his own. He unrolled a strip of paper, on which he had marked, as they arose above the horizon, all the fixed stars within a narrow belt, and opposite it was the time of its appearing. The slip ran on two small rollers in a box, with a sliding lid of glass. As the night went away and the stars passed over he can turn a crank of his watch and look in at the time marked.

American publishers are supposed to be enterprising, but the task of preparing, unaided, an English-Chinese dictionary and phrase book they do not seem equal to. Kwong Chin, a Chinese scholar, has just returned home after a seven year residence in this country, to complete such a dictionary and supervise the setting up of the Chinese style. Models will be taken there and forwarded to Hartford, where electrotype will be made, the plates ordered to the English plates, and where the printing of the book will be done.

The strongest man at Granite Corners, N. Y., is Stearns Carpenter, who is now 80 years old. Five years ago he weighed a twenty-four foot iron rail with each hand and walked off with it. At an earlier period he shouldered a cannon that weighed 1,800 pounds, and the next day lifted a box of iron that weighed 1,200. He used to go around where the neighbors were killing hogs and when a particularly big one was slaughtered he had a habit of twisting his fingers into its bristles, lifting the animal off the ground and going at its weight.

An appeal in behalf of the starving goats of Michigan may be looked for shortly. A Detroit man has built a furnace in which refuse tapers, such as cigar cans, fruit cans, etc., may be burned in such a manner that the ashes are returned to commerce and the sheets of tin, being rolled, are available for binding the edges of wood trucks. From five hundred pounds of old cans he obtains about thirty-five pounds of lead and solder, and from old boilers, pans and other tin dishes a considerable amount of wire and other iron, all of which can be sold at a fair price.

"Widder Jenkins," said an Ohio farmer, as he hustled into her home one morning. "I am a man of business, I am worth $10,000 and want you for a wife. I give you three minutes to decide to accept." "I don't want two seconds, old man," she replied, as she shook out the ditioli: "I'm a woman of business, worth $10,000, and I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth. I give you a minute and a half to get it."

An Ohio minister is charged with opening a prayer at a Monday evening class meeting in this fashion: "O Lord, Thou hast seen in the morning papers how the Sabbath was desecrated yesterday."
